The Cultural Journey

Welcome to the second issue of Your World magazine. This edition is an homage to the world's vibrant and diverse cultures, which provide some of the most powerful reasons for travelers to keep exploring.

Some of my most meaningful travel experiences have unfolded at the intersection of art, food, history and local encounters, and I'm certain many of yours have as well. At Oceania Cruises, we have always been explorers at heart, and our passion is connecting travelers with places and people around the world that provide meaning alongside adventure.

That's why, in this issue, we're diving into the deep-rooted traditions of French Polynesia and taking you off the beaten path in Sydney with an insider's guide to favorite foodie spots and hidden gems. We've also uncovered unforgettable island experiences that will connect you to local ways of life in the Caribbean and revealed the best coffee and café culture – one of my favorite topics – across Vietnam, France, Melbourne and beyond. Our city spotlights showcase the best places to dine, sip, shop and explore in some of the most iconic cities in Asia and South America.

I hope you'll enjoy this issue of Your World as much as we enjoyed putting it together, and that it inspires you to dream bigger, travel farther and explore more deeply in the year ahead. We can't wait to welcome you aboard one of our small and luxurious ships soon for a cultural journey, where each destination offers not just a new place to discover, but a new way of seeing the world.

Warm regards,

HONG KONG

JOURNEY TO HONG KONG, WHERE A
CAPTIVATING BLEND OF OLD-WORLD ELEMENTS
MEETS MODERN SOPHISTICATION.

WRITTEN BY: KATIE LOCKHART

At once glittering and gritty, Hong Kong unites towering skyscrapers and lush nature in one of the world's largest financial metropolises. But there's plenty of local flavor to enjoy here too. Set your sights beyond the banks and luxury shopping centers, exploring the city's cubbyhole coffee shops, buzzing markets and Michelin-starred Cantonese eateries – all of which you'll find in abundance.

Tian Tan Buddha

Victoria Harbour

Mall in Hong Kong

EXPLORE

Hop aboard the city's beloved double-deck tram, affectionately known as a "Ding Ding," and make your way to the top level to watch the city's colors and commotion whiz by. Once you've gotten the lay of the land, wander through Sheung Wan, the city's trendiest neighborhood, where old and new Hong Kong collide in designer boutiques, galleries and traditional shopping stalls. While you're there, have your fortune told at Man Mo Temple, one of the oldest on the island. Then take the Peak Tram funicular railway up to The Peak, where you'll enjoy panoramic views of the city skyline and Victoria Harbour.

DINE

Hong Kong is a true food city, with culinary offerings that reflect its international population. From Michelin Guide-recommended bowls of rice to 16-course French feasts, there's something to suit every palate. Book a table for lunch at Man Wah, located inside the Mandarin Oriental Hong Kong; it's known for having some of the city's best dim sum and char siu (addictive Cantonese barbecued pork) with a view. Noodle lovers can't miss Mak's Noodle, which serves up steaming bowls of handmade wonton noodles. For more far-flung flavors, try a Latin American tasting menu at Michelin-starred Mono or the city's best meatballs at Pici.

Man Mo Temple

SHOP

For unique gifts and souvenirs, head to the storied Central Market, which dates back to 1842. There, inside a historic Bauhaus-style building, tiny shops and kiosks sell food, art, knickknacks, ceramics and more. If you're looking for Chinese antiques, browse the myriad shops along Hollywood Road. To shop 'til you drop like the locals do, visit one of Hong Kong's massive malls, like Landmark or Pacific Place, where you'll find nearly every high-end brand on Earth.

SIP

Home to one of Asia's best cocktail scenes, Hong Kong offers many innovative ways to imbibe. Line up for The Savory Project, where the team behind Asia's award-winning bar, Coa, crafts unique food-inspired cocktails. For something sweeter, try Tell Camellia, where the cocktail creations are built upon a foundation of teas from around the globe. Should you need a drink during the day, head to Plantation Tea Bar, where true tea lovers can taste some 20 expertly brewed infusions. Don't leave Hong Kong without trying its signature "silk stocking" milk tea at old standby Lan Fong Yuen, where the secret to a perfect cup is straining the tea through a cloth that resembles pantyhose.

AT ONCE FUTURISTIC AND TRADITIONAL,
UNPREDICTABLE AND ORDERLY, JAPAN'S SPRAWLING
CAPITAL IS A DELIGHTFUL STUDY IN CONTRASTS.

WRITTEN BY: LAURA STUDARUS

Tokyo is a city of awe-inspiring juxtapositions. High-speed trains whisk visitors to the city's estimated 1,450 shrines. A thriving international food scene (which claimed a whopping 263 Michelin stars in 2023) highlights everything from traditional fare to some of the best pizza you'll taste anywhere in the world (for the latter, don't miss PST Roppongi). And lush green spaces like Inokashira Park and Rikugien Garden provide a welcome respite from the bustling urban landscape.

EXPLORE

To the uninitiated, Tokyo can seem intimidating. Download the Welcome Suica e-money card on your phone to access the city's impressive public transit system with a single tap, then take it one neighborhood at a time. Swing by Shinjuku Gyoen, an Edo-period residence turned national garden with a stunning greenhouse. Explore Japanese artist Yayoi Kusama's body of work beyond her iconic Infinity Mirror Rooms at the Yayoi Kusama Museum. In the quiet neighborhood of Setagaya, celebrate Studio Ghibli's anime filmmaking at Shiro-Hige's Cream Puff Factory, a cozy bakery and tea house known for adorable cream puffs shaped like the Ghibli character Totoro. And don't miss the city's countless temples. It's hard to find a site more peaceful and eye-catching than Gōtokuji Temple, which features multiple shrines and many charming manekineko (waving cats).

DINE

Tree by Naked offers a dazzling, ¥39,600 multicourse dining experience that combines virtual reality, upscale fusion cuisine and Japanese storytelling. To get your fish fix, head to Sushi Dai at Tsukiji Fish Market, a tiny counter with an omakase menu so good, fans start queuing up for breakfast before sunrise. Don't discount the power of a convenience-store snack. Lawson sells buns, onigiri and egg-salad sandwiches so good, Anthony Bourdain dubbed them "pillows of love."

SHOP

The five-star Hotel Chinzanso is the perfect place to shop for high-end chocolates and silk scarves (a purchase gives you entrée to the hotel's stunning traditional Japanese gardens). Plan a stop at a department store like Daimaru Tokyo and Seibu Shibuya, where you'll find tourist favorites including woodblock prints, dolls and chopsticks. Looking to buy a kimono or yukata (a light cotton summer kimono)? Tansu-ya, a shop with several locations around the city, offers second-hand gowns at competitive prices.

SIP

Get educated about Japanese whisky at Hibiya Bar Whisky-S II in Ginza, where highballs are the signature drink. For a sip and a show, visit Bar Centifolia, where it's not uncommon to see bartenders cutting ice with a sword or setting the bar top on fire. For an extended night out, head to Golden Gai, a cozy Shinjuku neighborhood known for microbars where locals and visitors mingle.

FROM VIBRANT ENTERTAINMENT TO RICH CULTURE AND HISTORY, THIS CAPITAL CITY IS A SOUTH AMERICAN GEM.

WRITTEN BY: CATHERINE BROWN

The temperament of colorful Buenos Aires is anything but lukewarm. Set foot in the iconic soccer stadiums La Bombonera or Estadio Más Monumental and you'll feel the pulse of electricity from fans whose devotion to the sport is unrivaled. Observe an expertly danced tango in San Telmo and you might tear up as emotions stir within you. Buenos Aires may be known as the Paris of the South for its wide boulevards and elegant architecture, but it's residents' passion for worldly pleasures that leaves the most lasting impact on those who visit.

EXPLORE

In the historical Recoleta neighborhood, stroll past lavish former palaces and through the labyrinthian cemetery where Eva Perón, the former first lady of Argentina, rests before enjoying afternoon tea at L'Orangerie within the Alvear Palace Hotel, which has hosted notable guests ranging from the Emperor of Japan to Sean Connery. Peruse El Ateneo Grand Splendid bookstore, where the stacks are framed by gilded statues, marble columns and ceiling frescoes painted by Nazzareno Orlandi. Then head to the vibrant Palermo neighborhood, where the cutting-edge Malba art museum houses modern Latin American masterpieces from Diego Rivera, Rafael Barradas and Xul Solar. Breathe easy at the verdant 865-acre Costanera Sur Ecological Reserve in Puerto Madero before ending the evening at Rojo Tango for a tango show so intimate, you can sometimes feel a breeze from the dancers' movements.

DINE

Don Julio steakhouse may receive all the hype, but those in the know plan well in advance for an evening at Fogón, where a nine-course, fireside culinary journey elevates the Argentine asado (barbecue) to fine dining. For a more casual asado experience that doesn't compromise on quality, spend an afternoon with Frank Almeida, the charismatic owner of Asado Adventure Food Tours. On his signature tour, you'll tag along on a visit to his local butcher and wine shop before heading to his personal home, where you'll learn to grill like an Argentine — and feast on the mouth-watering results.

SHOP

There's plenty of retail therapy to be had in Buenos Aires' captivating local boutiques. For home goods, visit Facón, where owner and art director Martín Bustamante empowers rural communities through his sales of their artisanal pottery, rugs, gaucho knives, textiles and more. Another must-see is Fieguia 1833, where master perfumer Julian Bedel artfully blends scents from the Argentine countryside. If antiques are what you seek, shopping along the cobblestone streets of bohemian San Telmo could keep you happily treasure hunting for days.

SIP

Oenophiles seeking a high-quality by-the-glass menu should head straight to Hache Almacén, where Argentine varietals pair perfectly with a picada, a charcuterie board piled with local meats and cheeses. If cocktails are more your style, visit Presidente, a Recoleta watering hole with opulent chandeliers, sky-high ceilings and a library-esque private bar in the back. The stylish spot is known for Negronis but is also a great place to try a refreshing Branca Smash, which adds pineapple, lemon and fresh mint to Fernet-Branca, a bitter liqueur that's a favorite among Argentinians.

Café in Paris set amongst historical architecture

It's impossible to overstate coffee's impact. The mighty bean and resulting liquid have influenced global commerce and daily life since farmers first began cultivating the crop centuries ago in Africa and the Arabian peninsula. Coffee has since spread to all corners of the world, establishing itself as a ubiquitous drink in homes and cafés. But just like we've seen with wine or whiskey, coffee walks a fine line between commoditization and personalization — sure it's everywhere, but its availability and appeal have allowed countries, cultures and individuals to put their own unique stamps on this beloved beverage and the spaces that serve it.

Some cafés act as utility-first purveyors of food and drinks, while others play an outsized role in a destination's social fabric, providing locals and visitors with gathering spaces to meet, talk and relax. These five café-obsessed cities should be on every coffee lover's list.

Graben Street in Vienna

Vienna

Vienna's café culture is an integral part of the city's identity — so much so that in 2011, UNESCO added Vienna's cafés to its national inventory of intangible cultural heritage. Since the 17th century, cafés here have served as gathering points for locals, first drawing intellectuals, artists, musicians and politicians before eventually attracting a broader clientele encompassing people from all walks of life. More than just a place to sip coffee, cafés were where the Viennese met to discuss the major events of the day. Centuries later, they remain popular bases for locals and tourists to socialize and relax.

One iconic go-to is Café Central. Located in the heart of Vienna and open since 1876, it's known as much for its elegant architecture and ornate interiors as for its coffee and pastries. At Café Sacher, which also opened in 1876, you can indulge in a sachertorte, the famed Viennese chocolate cake, or tuck into an apfelstrudel (apple strudel) with your coffee. Modern cafés abound in Vienna, but it's historic establishments like these that offer the greatest sensory rewards.

Since the 17th century, cafés in Vienna have served as gathering points for locals, first drawing intellectuals, artists, musicians and politicians before eventually attracting a broader clientele encompassing people from all walks of life.

Ho Chi Minh City

Vietnam is the world's second largest coffee producer after Brazil, but its relationship with coffee isn't export-only, as cafés have proliferated across the country. That's especially evident in Ho Chi Minh City (also called Saigon), which has a booming café scene. Options include French-influenced cafés and modern shops with sleek espresso machines and latte-laced menus.

Some of the best experiences can be had at the numerous no-frills, garage-like shops throughout the city. Most rely on a phin — the traditional device used to brew and filter Vietnamese coffee — and sweeten the robusta bean brews with condensed milk. Start at Hummingbird Café & Roastery. Located in a small District 3 alley, it approaches coffee with a contemporary sensibility, turning single-origin beans into lattes, piccolos, Americanos and more. 96B Café & Roastery in District 1 is part café, part instruction lab. Try one of their signature drinks, like the salted cream latte or a cold brew spiked with pineapple and mint, then join one of its workshops. Sensory training classes educate attendees on how to taste and evaluate coffee like a pro, while other hands-on workshops teach proper phin use and how to make a traditional egg coffee with whipped egg yolks, condensed milk and sugar.

Paris

Parisian café culture is easy to spot, with bistros and coffee shops spilling out onto the streets at seemingly every corner. These are vital social hubs where locals and tourists chat with friends or simply pass the time and watch the world go by; it's common for patio chairs to face the street, giving patrons a better view of the action. Grab-and-go coffee shops exist, but in Paris, stopping for an espresso and a croissant is more about savoring the moment. No one else is rushed, including your server, so feel free to sit and stay awhile.

The options are endless in Paris, and some of the best experiences come from unplanned stops at the nearest street-side café. But when you require a really good cup of coffee, you can't go wrong at Ten Belles. Now with multiple locations across the city, it's a reliable favorite for house-roasted beans and fresh-baked sourdough and pastries. At Coutume Café, a pioneer of Paris' third-wave coffee – a movement elevating coffee to a specialty product like wine or craft beer – skilled baristas make espresso shots and slow-extraction filtered coffees. Stop into Le Peloton Café for coffee and a dose of cycling culture, or check out 11th arrondissement hot spot Passager, a sunny respite offering caffeine, egg dishes and other sweet and savory bites.

Melbourne

Melbourne is widely regarded as the coffee capital of Australia — some call it the coffee capital of the world — and for good reason. The city's love affair with coffee is relatively recent, having picked up steam in the mid-20th century when Italian and Greek immigrants brought their traditions and espresso machines to the city. It has been riding the coffee wave ever since, and today, Melbourne is teeming with coffee shops. Chains have a presence, but the city is particularly known for its independent shops and local roasters. Most offer a variety of beans, and skilled baristas treat coffee with care, serving pour-overs, flat whites, cappuccinos and other drinks with precision.

Cafés are an integral part of Melbourne's social scene, providing comfortable places for people to meet friends, work remotely or stop for a quick caffeine fix before going into the office or out for the evening. Pellegrini's Espresso Bar, a family-run icon dating back to 1954, is a popular stop on any self-guided café tour. More modern operations can be found at Seven Seeds, a Melbourne University district micro-roaster known for its variety of single-origin beans and blends, and Patricia Coffee Brewers, a centrally located favorite serving house espresso blends and filter coffees in a bustling, standing-room-only space.

FOR MELBOURNE VOYAGE INSPIRATION, SEE PAGES 68-75.

Buenos Aires

Cafés comprise the beating heart of Buenos Aires. More than 70 of the city's most historic cafés, dubbed bares notables, are recognized by the government for their cultural importance as community anchors and meeting places for prominent writers, artists, musicians and politicians. These historic cafés — some dating back more than a century—are like time capsules brimming with period decor and old-world grandeur. Favorites include Café Margot and La Flor de Barracas, both serving good coffee, aperitivos and snacks.

Modern coffee shops also abound, and Buenos Aires' acceptance of third-wave coffee is evident in places like Full City Coffee House in the Palermo Soho neighborhood. The coffee house and roastery sells filtered coffees, espressos and lattes alongside pastries and desserts. Lattente is another go-to pick; with several locations across the city, it offers multiple opportunities to stop in and linger over high-quality coffees created with a variety of brewing methods. Pro tip: When you're in Buenos Aires and want a break from coffee, follow the locals' lead and sip on mate, a popular tea-like drink made from the leaves of the yerba mate plant that's enjoyed throughout Argentina.

Beyond the Beauty

Discover the deep-rooted cultural traditions of French Polynesia.

WRITTEN BY: JILL K. ROBINSON

Mount Otemanu and the lagoon of Bora Bora

Taking a deep breath of air once my feet are firmly on the ground in Pape'ete has become a ritual. The sweet scent of salt, earth and vegetation mixed with the petrichor of recent rain erases any lingering ill effects from a long-haul flight to the capital city of French Polynesia (commonly known as the Islands of Tahiti) and sets me at ease. It can be easy to miss this sensory moment in the excitement of arrival, but I've always considered it an important first encounter with mana of Tahiti — the vital force that lives in and links all things, past and present, to the deep spirit of this place.

In this region of 118 islands and atolls, nature is front and center. The feeling of being one small creature amid the deep emerald landscape and the intense azure hues of the ocean is elemental, as if I've been woven into it all like a fiber in the ubiquitous pandanus-leaf baskets, hats and mats of French Polynesia. It's impossible to avoid being guided by your senses here, and the intoxicating fragrance of monoï oil — a blend of coconut oil and tiare flower that's a staple in Tahitian beauty practices — permeates the islands.

The mana of nature, people and Tahitian culture isn't merely a scent that lingers on the breeze. As I learned the traditional way of making monoï, I could feel it when grating a fresh coconut and pressing out the milk, adding fragrant tiare flowers and letting the mixture steep in the warm sun. Such everyday activities, simple and without fanfare, can be the nature of mana. It's tangible and intangible, revealing and mysterious.

Traditional ma'a dish includes fresh fish, fried rice, taro and sweet potato

Traditional French Polynesian dancers

French Polynesian hats at a local market

Throughout the islands of Tahiti, marae (traditional temples) are the most visible remains of ancient Tahitian culture. These open-air places of worship have long hosted celebrations of births and deaths, village meetings and seasonal ceremonies and — perhaps most notably at Ra’iatea island’s marae complex and UNESCO World Heritage site known as Taputapuātea — have influenced the whole of Polynesia. Walking among the black stones at Taputapuātea, I feel more than the sun’s warm rays. When I hear other visitors speak in hushed tones, it’s clear to me that I’m not the only one who notices. Mana, the energy that pulses through all things, seems almost palpable.

The ancient Polynesians used the stars, waves and wind to navigate as they migrated by va’a, or canoe, throughout the Pacific and voyaged to Taputapuātea for regular gatherings of chiefs, priests and warriors. Today, modern versions of those sailing vessels, Polynesian outrigger canoes, can be seen everywhere among the islands as children learn to sail in the wake of their ancestors. The soundtrack of waves splashing, wind whistling through a canoe’s rigging, and the snap of the sail connects Polynesians across time.

Also indelibly etched into this culture is the tradition of tattooing, which persists throughout the Polynesian triangle, though specific practices can vary by archipelago and family lineage. The uniqueness of each tattoo is reflective of the individual and their place in the world —where they’re from, who’s in their family and the accomplishments they’ve achieved. Whether a person’s tattoo is created with the traditional tool of sharpened bone with a wooden handle or the more modern machine, it’s their life and mana that gives the design meaning.

Festive occasions in French Polynesia call for yet another deep-rooted tradition, in which ma’a Tahiti (Tahitian food) is cooked in an earth oven called an ’ahima’a. The day before the meal, a large hole is dug and filled with coconut husks, twigs and volcanic stones, then set on fire. By morning, the stones are hot enough to cook food wrapped in banana leaves. When the steamed contents are ready, the sealed oven is opened and the fragrance of fresh fish, pork, breadfruit, taro, fē’i bananas and sweet potatoes fills the air. There’s nothing quite like this slightly smoky, succulent meal that Polynesians have made for generations, and the effort and patience required to prepare it is more than worthwhile.

Your own island encounter with mana may happen over such a meal, or when a sunset’s dreamy hues shift from tangerine to lavender, when you duck beneath the surface of the water to spy colorful marine life, or when you simply forget about the responsibilities awaiting you back home. Mana seems palpable on the Islands of Tahiti, but it’s portable too. Your own mana introduces you before you can do so in words. Tending that energy source requires attention, but that first encounter in French Polynesia will influence your ability to recognize mana everywhere you go.

It’s impossible to avoid being guided by your senses here, and the intoxicating fragrance of monoï oil permeates the islands.

An Insider's Guide to Sydney

We've uncovered the hidden gems unique to Australia's iconic capital.

WRITTEN BY: BELINDA LUKSIC

Sydney Harbour

It's not hard to fall in love with Sydney. The cosmopolitan city is postcard-worthy, with its Opera House and sparkling harbor – best viewed during a BridgeClimb excursion to the top of the Harbour Bridge – providing one of the most iconic views you'll find anywhere in the world. From the hikeable, 50-mile-long Bondi to Manly Walk, the views are just as glorious, encompassing white sand beaches, hidden swimming coves and sun-dappled rock pools splashed with surf.

But Sydney is a place of beauty and substance. Venture away from the rockstar beaches and you'll discover culture, dining and shopping scenes with a distinctly Australian flavor.

Urban Excursions

The Sydney Opera House is an obvious must-see – watch at sunset as the eastern sails are lit by Badu Gili: Celestial, an exquisite, animated light show featuring the work of Meriam artist Gail Mabo and international First Nations artist Nikau Hindin – but the White Rabbit Gallery might well be Sydney's best-kept art secret. Located on a leafy backstreet in Chippendale, this privately owned gallery is home to a large and exciting collection of Chinese contemporary art. Take the elevator to the top floor and explore rooms splashed with video art, installations and other eye-catching works, then end your visit with handmade dumplings and oolong tea at the street-level Tea House.

More world-class exhibitions await at the Art Gallery of New South Wales. The once-small museum overlooking the harbor was recently transformed into two buildings linked by a public art garden. The new North Building showcases art from around the world in its series of glass pavilions and outdoor terraces. Among the highlights is a massive, decommissioned World War II oil tank that has been reimagined as a spectacular subterranean art space. Apocalyptic, dark and dramatic, it totally steals the show.

Culinary Delights

No visit to Sydney is complete without a waterfront dining experience, and Promenade Bondi Beach provides a quintessential one. Located just steps from Bondi's golden sands, this local haunt tempts diners with its oceanfront terrace and seafood-centric menu that champions Australian produce and Asian flavors.

To get even closer to the waves, hop aboard a water taxi and zip across Middle Harbour for lunch at Ormeggio at the Spit. With its prime marina location and colored umbrellas, the seafood-only Italian restaurant would look right at home on the Amalfi Coast. Its menus travel the boat with such fun riffs on Italian cuisine as the swordfish "cotoletta," or cutlet.

For dishes that trade in fire and smoke, visit Ester, a Chippendale neighborhood restaurant that quickly gained a broad and loyal following. Order the blood sausage sanga, a twist on Australia's "democracy sausage" (a sausage wrapped in a slice of bread, often sold and enjoyed at polling places on election days) and a menu staple since this hotspot's 2013 debut.

Bar Vincent flies under the radar by contrast, but inside the Darlinghurst gem, the tables are busy, the vibe buzzy and the Italian-influenced fare elevated. Flavorful dishes ranging from delicate flounder to rich wild boar ragu are best paired with the natural wines for which this establishment is known.

Sydney's Thai cuisine rivals steamy Bangkok's best street food – for evidence, try Long Chim's barramundi and green mango salad. Or, venture to the edge of Chinatown, where 30-seat Porkfat packs a flavorsome punch with Thai dishes that eschew oil for, you guessed it, pork fat. The ingredient is a game-changer that elevates everything from the grilled pork jowl to the Queensland tiger prawns. Order both – you won't be sorry.

Cocktail Discoveries

As the sun dips toward the horizon, Sydneysiders welcome happy hour. A favorite spot to celebrate the tradition in the central business district is Restaurant Hubert's Pincer Bar, where Dubonnet highballs, or Negronis, pair beautifully with a side of saucisson sec and duck liver mousse parfait. Near Circular Quay, there's Maybe Sammy, a 1950s-themed, high-end cocktail bar that's ranked No. 15 by The World's 50 Best Bars. Arrive at 4:30 p.m. for mini martini hour, then stay for lobster rolls, truffled toasted cheese sandwiches, oysters and more.

Sydney's love affair with wine bars arguably began with the opening of Love, Tilly Devine. Tucked down a Darlinghurst alleyway, this hidden charmer seats only 40 guests, but don't let its size fool you. Its wine list includes some 300 selections, including an array of Australian wines by the glass.

Sydney's central business district is home to the city's longest bar and best vinyl collection, both of which can be found at the speakeasy-style Caterpillar Club. There, red leather banquettes, dim lighting and a soundtrack of disco, funk, R&B and jazz provide a sexy backdrop for a well-curated mix of house cocktails, wines, beers and bar bites.

Retail Therapy

The Paddington neighborhood's jacaranda-lined streets are a haven for high-end designers and artists. The Intersection, on the corner of Oxford Street and Glenmore Road, is its hottest shopping district. There, you'll find Scanlan Theodore's flagship store showcasing elegant women's apparel crafted from fine fabrics, plus the latest collections from Dion Lee, Sass & Bide, Bassike and resort wear go-to Zimmermann.

Paddington is also home to Dinosaur Designs, a studio that's been crafting resin homewares and chunky jewelry since 1985. Designed by co-founders Louise Olsen and Stephen Ormandy, the works are timeless and speak of the sea, sand, sun, sky and Australian bush.

Double Bay is another can't-miss destination for designer shopping. Join the well-heeled for a stroll along Bay, Knox and Cross Streets, making sure to browse Jan Logan's exquisite designer jewelry and Mud Australia's bold yet functional porcelain homewares.

Top 10 Caribbean Experiences

A trip to the Caribbean isn't complete without adding one of these authentic adventures to your list.

WRITTEN BY: SARAH GREAVES-GABBADON

01

Cruise a river in Dominica

Known as the “nature island,” Dominica has 365 rivers and streams. One of the most scenic is Indian River, where you can board a brightly painted boat for a leisurely cruise through waters lined by tangled mangroves. Keep an eye out for the “Love Zone,” where trees on each bank grow toward one another, converging in a lush canopy. At the turnaround point, Cobra’s Bush Bar awaits. The water’s-edge oasis is the perfect place to crack open a frosty, island-brewed Kubuli beer, relax and watch the water.

02

Imbibe in a Piscine in St. Barts

Among the things this French Caribbean Island is known for - posh villas, idyllic sandy scallops and a loyal celebrity clientele - add a cocktail you might not have heard of. While the rest of the Caribbean is famous for its diverse iterations of rum punch, St. Barts is home to an equally delicious libation you’ll encounter only here, la piscine. The recipe for this tropical refresher is simple: a generous pour of champagne over ice and served in a stemmed glass. Designed to be enjoyed poolside (piscine is French for pool), it’s equally tasty sur la plage (on the beach) or from the comfort of an ocean-view perch.

Explore Kohunlich Mayan ruins in Costa Maya

For a glimpse into Mayan civilization, Kohunlich is a must-visit. The well-preserved ruins – many of which were constructed during the early Classic period – include Temple of the Masks, the Acropolis, the Plaza of the Stelae and a ball court. Discovered by archaeologist Raymond Merwin in 1912, the site is most noted for Temple of the Masks, a pyramid featuring a central stairway decorated with large-scale stucco masks depicting the sun god Kinich Ahau. Kohunlich is believed to have been an important hub for trade and culture, as evidenced by the varying Mayan architectural styles seen throughout.

Taste a fish cutter in Barbados

In Barbados, a sandwich is a “cutter,” and the classic fish cutter comes from Cuzz’s Fish Shack on Bridgetown’s Pebbles Beach. Run by the same family for more than 70 years – Cuzz and his father before him – the stand serves up a winning combination of pan-fried marlin filets nestled on a pillowy salt-bread bun, topped with lettuce and a slice of cheddar cheese. Dress yours with a mustardy Bajan hot sauce like the locals do, then wander over to the sand and enjoy it with an ocean view.

Ride the rails in St. Kitts

Hop aboard the St. Kitts Scenic Railway, affectionately called the “sugar train” by islanders in reference to the original locomotives that carried sugar cane from rural estates to a processing station in capital city Basseterre from 1926 until 2005. These days, the double-decker railcars (air-conditioned on the bottom, open air up top) follow a round-the-island route (two hours by rail and 45 minutes by bus), offering riders sweeping views of the Caribbean coast. A tour director narrates the journey, an a cappella trio sings Kittitian folk songs and the complimentary refreshments – including rum punch – flow freely.

Sip cactus liqueur in Bonaire

Drinking from a cactus would be a prickly affair. But you can enjoy the flavor of Bonaire’s kadushi cactus – minus the pain – at the Cadushi Distillery, a tiny facility in the town of Rincón. During the brief-but-informative distillery tour, you’ll learn how the unique Cadushi of Bonaire liqueur is made – a process that once involved drying strips of cactus on the dashboard of a pickup truck! The 80-proof alcohol eventually becomes an aromatic, neon-green elixir that is simultaneously sweet, herbal and floral.

Bathe in a waterfall in Grenada

The Caribbean’s “spice island” is blessed with more than a dozen waterfalls, and Concord Falls is one of its finest. Here, you can treat your shoulders to the ultimate massage beneath a cascade that has tumbled over a rock wall for centuries, smoothing each stone to a high sheen as it flows. If you’re lucky, you might see a daredevil diver scamper up to the falls’ head and somersault into the water, piercing its glassy surface with practiced ease.

Stroll pink sand beaches in Barbuda

Yes, the sand on two of Barbuda’s beaches really is pink. The lovely hue comes from tiny marine organisms whose delicate crushed shells form a rosy rug over the white sand – one that begs to be immortalized on your Instagram feed. The intensity of the pink varies with the weather (the shells are deposited by surging waves), but if you time your visit right, you’ll see the splendor for yourself.

Go rafting in Jamaica

Gliding on a handmade bamboo raft past the tropical forests that line Portland parish's Rio Grande is a uniquely Jamaican experience that was popularized by 1950s actor (and once-part-time resident) Errol Flynn. Today, the approximately two-hour trip through the river valley – bordered by mountains cloaked in tangles of wild orchids and heliconia – is an opportunity to see the island at its tranquil best. Tip: Jamaica's primordial beauty is best enjoyed with a Red Stripe beer or coconut water in hand, so make sure to purchase one from a riverside vendor along the way.

Snag a sculpture in St. Lucia

Frequent visitors to St. Lucia wouldn't dream of leaving the island without an original work from Zaka (named after the Haitian God of earth, trees and fields). The artist, formerly known as Simon Gajadhar, turns discarded telephone poles into brightly hued masks and fanciful sculptures. The one-time shipwright and carpenter moved to St. Lucia from his native London more than 20 years ago and has since made a name for himself crafting sustainable sculptures that are regarded as classic St. Lucia mementos. The sustainable souvenirs are sure to add a burst of Caribbean color to any home. Find yours at fine gift shops across the island.
